Referring to the meeting with businessmen, traders and economic activists in Turkmenistan, Ayatollah Ra'isi said: "In order to solve the problems of concluding gas and transit contracts, it can provide suitable conditions for the activities of traders and businessmen in Turkmenistan. Track and fix

Iran is a reliable trading partner and provider of Turkmenistan's basic needs. The factor of transportation and communication is also influential in the relations between the two countries. Turkmenistan's lack of access to open waters has made Iran's communication route important for Turkmenistan. The opening of the Mashhad-Sarakhs-Tajan and Bafgh-Bandar Abbas railways In addition, the two countries are cooperating in the field of technical and engineering projects, and Iran has made numerous investments in the technical and engineering sectors of Turkmenistan. The membership of the two countries in the Economic Cooperation Organization (ECO) is another factor that can affect the relations between the two countries.

Iran is Turkmenistan's second largest trading partner after Russia.

Iran and Turkmenistan pursue their economic cooperation within the framework of the Joint Economic Commission, and the Iranian Ministry of Foreign Affairs is responsible for the Iranian side of this commission. Turkmenistan is one of the major producers of oil and gas among the newly independent Central Asian countries, whose huge capacity and resources are limited due to the lack of export options. As a neighbor of Turkmenistan, Iran can play an important role in the development of bilateral cooperation for geographical and economic reasons.

Companies active in roundtables with the presence of economic activists from 5 Caspian countries in specialized panels focusing on oil and gas and petrochemicals, water and electricity and energy, construction industry, technical and engineering projects in road construction and buildings, building repairs, transport corridors and North-south transfers are followed by food and agriculture, medicine and medical equipment, home appliances and consumer goods in face-to-face conversations. This economic event of the Caspian Sea region causes the prosperity of business in the markets of the Caspian littoral states and the region and the development of exports of goods and services of economic actors and Iranian traders and merchants.
